GREELEY'S CONTESTED WILL.

The later evidence in the Greeley will ease has developed two or three points of public interest. The fact was adgood that the Weekly Tribune's circuation increased more than 50,000 copies uring the recent campaign. It has also brought out the fact that one of Mr. Greeley's friends endeavored to take adantage of his mental aberration to seure his Tribune stock at about one-haif s actual value. Mr. Sinclair, another riend, and the publisher of the Tribune t the time of Mr. Greeley's death, also tands accused of having made every fort to divert the course of the newspaper from Mr. Greeley's wishes and inentions at the very time he was a debtor Mr. Greeley's estate. If there are any more developments of this nature, will not be necessary to attribute Mr. Greeley's insanity and death to the exitement and disappointment of the election.
